SUPERSEDING INFORMATION

At all times relevant to this Superseding Information:

General Allegations

1. The defendant, TANMAYA KABRA, was a resident of Boston, Massachusetts until on or about June 2019, when he moved to Weehawken, New Jersey.

2. KABRA held himself out as a successful serial entrepreneur, venture capitalist, and angel investor in start-up companies. KABRA conducted his business individually and through LaunchByte.io, LLC (also known as The Kabra Group, LLC) and other affiliated companies.

Representative Victims

3. Victim 1, Victim 2, Victim 3, and Victim 4 were individuals who resided in Massachusetts and elsewhere, and whose identities are known to the United States Attorney. They were among the investors who fell victim to the fraud scheme described in this Superseding Information.

The Fraud Scheme

4. From in or about at least August 2017 through on or about August 4, 2019, KABRA attracted investors by holding himself out as a successful entrepreneur and investor, and by offering lucrative and low or no-risk returns on purported investments. KABRA solicited money from investors by falsely representing that their money would be used to foster the growth and development of start-up companies, to prepare those companies for sale, or for other legitimate business opportunities. Instead of investing the funds he received in legitimate business opportunities, however, KABRA used much of the money that he received for other purposes, including to pay personal expenses.

Victims 1 and 2

5. Victim 1 and Victim 2 were individuals residing in Boston, Massachusetts who invested funds with KABRA in or about July 2018.

6. KABRA met Victim 1 in or around December 2017. KABRA presented himself to Victim 1 as a successful investor and entrepreneur who, through his work and business contacts, had access to various lucrative investment opportunities. During the first half of 2018, Victim 1 made loans to KABRA's business—in amounts less than $50,000—which were repaid to Victim 1 with interest.

7. On or about June 20, 2018, KABRA sent two text messages to Victim 1. The first read: "Do you want to go in with me on a bigger deal." The second read: "It's 120 days and it's a fatter payout." Victim 1 responded on the same day: "Possibly. What's the deal?"

8. In a series of text messages exchanged over the next several days, KABRA outlined the purported deal to Victim 1. KABRA represented that he would invest alongside Victim 1 and that the money would be invested with a third party. He further indicated that the investment would earn a 30 percent return and payments would be made every 30 days.

KABRA also represented that the investment would be backed by “[t]okenized collateral” and, in response to a question from Victim 1 regarding the risk, KABRA indicated that there was “none” because of the collateral and because KABRA himself was securing repayment.

9. On or about June 28, 2018, Victim 1 introduced KABRA to Victim 2 via text messages. In a series of text messages sent that day, KABRA provided an outline of a proposal similar to what he had described to Victim 1.

10. Ultimately, Victim 1 agreed to invest $250,000 with KABRA’s company, LaunchByte, and Victim 2 agreed to invest $100,000 with LaunchByte.

11. KABRA and Victim 2 executed a promissory note dated July 2, 2018. KABRA and Victim 1 executed a promissory note dated July 7, 2018. Both notes were signed using DocuSign, an online service that permits documents to be signed electronically.

12. The promissory notes identified the purpose of the investments by Victim 1 and Victim 2 as “financing the startup,” provided for an interest rate of 32 percent, and stated that “[t]he principal due hereunder shall be payable in one (1) installment four (4) months from the first day (kickoff) of the project, or three payments during the term not more than thirty (30) days apart from each other.” The note between Victim 1 and KABRA identified the amount of Victim 1’s investment as $250,000. The note between Victim 2 and KABRA identified the amount of Victim 2’s investment as $150,000—though Victim 2 actually provided only $100,000 to KABRA.

13. Victim 1 executed a $250,000 cashier's check from Santander Bank dated July 6, 2018 payable to KABRA. The check was deposited on or about that day into a personal checking account at Santander Bank in KABRA's name (the "SANT-9382 Account"). Immediately prior to this deposit, the SANT-9382 account had a balance of $0.00.

14. On or about July 5, 2018, Victim 2—through his business—transferred $30,000 via wire to an account at Brookline Bank in the name of LaunchByte.io LLC (the "Brookline-3538 Account"). Victim 2 transferred an additional $20,000 and $50,000 to the Brookline-3538 Account on or about July 6 and July 9, 2018, respectively.

15. The money provided to KABRA by Victim 1 and Victim 2 was not used "for the purpose of financing the startup" as set forth in the promissory notes. In addition, contrary to his representations, KABRA did not invest any of his own funds in the purported "deal."

16. Instead, on or about July 9, 2018, Kabra wired $201,500 of the funds fraudulently obtained from Victim 1 from the SANT-9382 account to the Rockland Trust Company account of a marina in Peabody, MA to purchase a boat.

17. In addition, KABRA used funds he received from Victim 1 and Victim 2 to pay off pre-existing credit card debt, including both personal and business expenses.

18. Despite representations in his text messages that Victim 1 and Victim 2 would be repaid in monthly installments, and despite repeated assurances that payments would be made promptly, KABRA did not make any payments to Victim 1 and Victim 2 through September 2018. Instead, KABRA strung them along by making a series of excuses and misrepresentations, including that: (1) KABRA's accounts had been blocked due to verifications being conducted by the Internal Revenue Service ("IRS") and the Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC"), (2)

KABRA had incorrectly entered wire instructions when wiring funds to Victim 2, and (3) in excess of $1 million had been transferred into KABRA's accounts and would be available to repay Victim 1 and Victim 2 shortly.

19. On or about October 18, 2018, KABRA received a wire from a third party into the Brookline-3538 Account in the amount of $75,000 with a notation "loan." That day, KABRA wired $34,500 to Victim 2 from the Brookline-3538 Account and delivered to Victim 2 a sum of cash.

20. KABRA paid Victim 2 an additional $80,000 via wire transfer on December 18, 2018, using $250,000 that KABRA solicited from Victim 3—as described below. In addition to repaying Victim 2, KABRA also used a portion of the $250,000 from Victim 3 to make a payment of $88,500 to the third party who had wired $75,000 to KABRA on October 18, 2018.

21. Victim 1 has not received repayment of his $250,000 investment with KABRA.

Victim 3

22. Victim 3 was an individual residing in Brookline, Massachusetts who was a social acquaintance of KABRA. Victim 3 invested funds with KABRA in or about December 2018.

23. At some point in 2018, KABRA approached Victim 3 about a purported investment opportunity. KABRA told Victim 3 that the investment would be backed by a promissory note with KABRA personally guaranteeing the note. KABRA represented that the term of the investment would be one year, at which point Victim 3 would receive $300,000 on an investment of $250,000.

24. KABRA explained to Victim 3 that the note would comprise part of $1 million in debt that would be used to finance the acquisition of LaunchByte's portfolio by KV Ventures, a fund that KABRA told Victim 3 he was launching. In an email dated December 6, 2018, KABRA advised Victim 3 that KV Ventures had already completed a “first close” of $7 million, that “wires are coming in,” and that he needed the additional $1 million to complete the “second close” of the fund.

25. On or about December 13, 2018, KABRA and Victim 3 executed a promissory note reflecting Victim 3’s $250,000 investment. The note indicated that the investment was for the purpose of “financing the acquisition of the portfolio,” that the investment carried an interest rate of 20 percent, and that principal and interest would be paid “starting 12 months from the execution of this Agreement or receipt of funds, whichever is later.”

26. As described above, contrary to the representations in KABRA’s December 6, 2018 email to Victim 3 and the terms of the promissory note, the funds provided by Victim 3 were not used for “the purpose of financing the acquisition of the portfolio.” Instead, Kabra used the money to repay $80,000 to Victim 2 and $88,500 to the third-party who had transferred $75,000 to KABRA two months earlier.

Victim 4

27. KABRA met Victim 4 at a party in or about 2018. KABRA told Victim 4 that one of the start-up companies in LaunchByte’s portfolio had signed a letter of intent to be acquired by a large, well-known company, and convinced Victim 4 to enter into a $75,000 promissory note—which LaunchByte and KABRA himself would guarantee. Victim 4 understood that his investment would be used to facilitate the purchase of the start-up company.

28. KABRA and Victim 4 executed a promissory note, dated August 1, 2018, reflecting Victim 4’s $75,000 investment. The note indicated that the investment was for purposes of “financing the startup,” that the note carried an interest rate of 20 percent, and that principal and interest were “payable in one (1) installment six (6) months from the date of this Agreement.”

29. On or about August 3, 2018, Victim 4 wired $75,000 to the Brookline-3538 Account with a memo accompanying the wire identifying the “purpose” of the payment as “investment.”

30. KABRA’s representations to Victim 4 were false. In fact, the start-up company never entered into a letter of intent to be acquired by the larger well-known company.

31. To avoid paying Victim 4, KABRA made a number of excuses and misrepresentations, including that LaunchByte would be acquired and that Victim 4 would be paid when that occurred, and that money to repay Victim 4 had been deposited into KABRA’s accounts, but had not yet cleared.

32. Despite the repeated representations that funds would be available, Victim 4 was not repaid until June 2019. KABRA ultimately paid Victim 4 $120,000 on or about June 12, 2019, using funds solicited from new investors in LaunchByte.
